Craven Dunnill targets commercial sector

Ceramic tile distributor and manufacturer Craven Dunnill has launched its first brochure specifically targeting the contract tile sector. The company's new Ceramic Prospectus highlights the comprehensive range of services and portfolio of over 10,000 stocked products, which the company offers commercial customers. Craven Dunnill handles small to multi-million pound projects which span the entire contract sector and include leisure, public buildings, new homes, transport and heritage buildings. The company consistently wins awards for its service levels and expertise.

Steve Whitehurst, Marketing Director at Craven Dunnill has been responsible for developing the Ceramic Prospectus and drawing together the extensive experience of the Craven Dunnill Group: "For the first time Craven Dunnill is saying to the commercial sector that we have the experience, the expertise and the product – come and talk to us".

Craven Dunnill is a one-stop distributor and manufacturer of ceramic wall and floor tiles providing a national service to builders, developers, contractors, architects, councils, companies and organisations. The company stocks a choice of more than 10,000 products, plus accessories such as adhesives and grouts, at its Bridgnorth warehouse and provides technical expertise, on-site delivery, bespoke manufacture and exclusivity arrangements.

Sister company Craven Dunnill Jackfield is acclaimed for its manufacturing prowess hand-making authentic heritage tiles and has worked on many award-winning and prestigious projects including Leeds Library and The London Underground.
