Classic Marble Meets Rustic Metal

The new Estatuario series of ceramic floor and wall tiles from Craven Dunnill convincingly replicates marble including bevelled edges, naturally occurring veins, and large formats of almost a metre.

The Estatuario series of ceramic tiles looks and feels like marble, being entirely smooth and veined, similar to natural cut stone, and creates a classic look to a room. The bevelled edge adds an additional dimension to decorating with ceramic tiles. Estatuario is available 605 x 305 mm without bevelled edge and 893 x 295mm with bevelled edge for walls and 450 x 450mm for floors.

The increasing sophistication of ceramic tiles has encouraged Designers to experiment. An innovative new look is the fusion of classic extravagance, in the form of marble-look tiles, with industrial, metallic finishes. The new tile range of Estatuario can be seen here on the walls (below) combined with the new Rustic Metal range from Craven Dunnill's Renaissance Collection.

Rustic Metal is likewise a new range from Craven Dunnill's Renaissance Collection. Available in bronze or silver metallic finish, the surface is pitted with random, abstract markings. Rustic Metal is available 450 x 450mm for floor and walls and as a mesh-backed mosaic 295 x 145mm.

Craven Dunnill is a leading distributor of ceramic tiles with over 10,000 options in its Renaissance collection, all of which are stocked. The collection is regularly updated with new designs. The company has a public and trade showroom at its headquarters in Bridgnorth and a new website www.cravendunnill.co.uk which highlights an inspirational selection of current and new ranges.
